

CT Working Moms Blogger Elise Schreier to Appear on Ricki Lake Show

Will discuss gay parenting issues in front of national audience

January 15, 2013
For Immediate Release

GLASTONBURY, CT (January 15, 2013) – The Connecticut Working Moms (CWM) website, an online resource for women balancing work and family life is pleased to announce that one of their bloggers, Elise Schreier of Newington will appear on the Ricki Lake Show in California for a taping on Thursday, January 17, 2013. Elise and her wife, Andrea, will discuss gay parenting in front of a live studio audience.

Elise was found by one of the producers for an interview she did on www.itsconceivablenow.com. Also, Elise has her own blog called Our Growing Family (www.2mommies2be.wordpress.com) where she discusses her journey to parenthood, including struggles with infertility, becoming foster parents and adopting a sibling group of three. Her goal of the interview with Ricki Lake is to help get an inside look at gay parenting and same-sex families; and to help see just how far from an "alternative lifestyle" it is.

"I'm happy to take any opportunity to normalize gay parenting. To show the world that parenting with two moms is just as happy, loving, crazy, and hard as any other family configuration," said Elise Schreier.

Michelle Noehren, Founder of CT Working Mom's states, "We all are very proud of Elise for this wonderful opportunity to share her story with a national audience. It is exactly in-line with the CT Working Mom's mission to share real stories from real working mothers."
